BUSINESS GUIDE TO THE UNITED NATIONS MILLENNIUM DEVELOPMENT GOALS SUMMIT

NEW YORK
20 – 24 SEPTEMBER 2010

1. CONTEXT

1.1 Accelerating progress towards the Millennium Development Goals: The UN MDG Summit, 20-22 September 2010

In 2000, 189 governments committed to achieve the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs) by 2015. The MDGs are eight internationally-agreed targets which aim to reduce poverty, hunger, maternal and child deaths, disease, inadequate shelter, gender inequality and environmental degradation in developing countries.

Despite remarkable progress in some countries, there remain shortfalls toward the achievement of the MDGs, further aggravated by the economic crisis. As stated by the United Nations Secretary-General, “the shortfalls in progress towards the MDGs are not because they are unreachable or because the time is too short, but rather because of unmet commitments, inadequate resources, lack of focus and accountability, and insufficient interest in sustainable development. This has resulted in failure to deliver on the necessary finance, services, technical support and partnerships.”¹

Between 20-22 September, the United Nations Secretary-General will convene a special summit on the MDGs in New York to take stock on what has been achieved to date and to accelerate progress towards the MDGs. The Action Agenda for the Summit is outlined in the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) report entitled “What Will It Take To Achieve the Millennium Development Goals? An International Assessment”.² The report, released on 18 June 2010, examines progress made on the MDGs and identifies actions required over the next five years to achieve the targets.

From a private sector perspective, the report identifies inclusive, private sector-led economic growth as one of the key acceleration strategies required to help meet the targets for poverty and hunger reduction by 2015.

The MDG action plan outlined in the UNDP report will help to inform and shape the agenda for the Summit, identifying eight key areas of action:

- Supporting nationally-owned and participatory development;
- Pro-poor, job-rich inclusive growth including the private sector;
- Government investments in social services like health and education;
- Expanding opportunities for women and girls;
- Access to low carbon energy;
- Domestic resource mobilization;
- Delivery on Official Development Assistance commitments.

1.2 MDG Summit overview

The UN Summit on the MDGs will be attended by heads of state, government representatives, international agencies, civil society, and the private sector. The purpose of the Summit is to review areas of progress and best practice, identify where gaps and barriers remain and adopt a plan of action to be agreed and implemented by UN member states.

The main Summit will comprise six plenary meetings and six interactive roundtables over the course of three days. The six roundtables will have at least 50 seats each and will be co-chaired by two heads of state or government. They will focus on “Making it happen by 2015”.

Civil society and private sector organizations will be entitled to four seats in each of the roundtables. Who holds these seats will be determined by the President of the General Assembly.

A range of subject-specific side meetings will also take place around the fringes of the Summit, with events relevant to business identified below.

For more on the background and purpose of the Summit, see <http://www.un.org/en/mdg/summit2010/>.

1.3 Accelerating progress towards the MDGs through inclusive business

It is now widely recognized that private sector-led economic growth and wealth creation is essential for the achievement of the MDGs. Business, as an engine of growth and development, has the potential to have a huge impact on improving the lives of people in developing countries through increasing investment, creating jobs, building skills, and developing goods, technologies and innovations which can make people’s lives better.

Business is most notably taking a proactive role in addressing development challenges through inclusive business – sustainable business solutions that expand access to goods, services, and livelihood opportunities for low-income communities in commercially viable ways.

Inclusive business involves doing business with low-income populations across companies' value chains, incorporating them in the supply, production, distribution and/or marketing of goods and services. This generates new jobs, incomes, technical skills and local capacity. Likewise, poorer consumers can benefit from products and services that meet their needs in affordable ways.

As stated in a recent report, “inclusive business is interesting for companies because it can offer new opportunities for innovation, growth, and competitiveness at the same time as positive social and development impact. It is interesting for bilateral and multilateral donors, foundations, governments, and civil society organizations because it has the potential to drive development impact in self-sustaining, self-multiplying ways that do not require continuous infusions of grant funding. And it is interesting for the poor because it brings greater access, choice, and opportunity in their lives and futures.”³

2. INCLUSIVE BUSINESS EVENT ON 21 SEPTEMBER

To coincide with the UN MDG Summit, a number of the world’s leading business networks and initiatives have come together to rally business energy and expertise around inclusive business models, in support of the MDGs.

Date: 21 September 2010

Time: 14:00 - 18:00

Place: Millennium UN Plaza Hotel New York, One United Nations Plaza, 44th Street between First and Second Avenue, New York, NY

The event aims to gather between 100 and 150 specially invited leaders from business, governments, and NGOs around the world to:

- Provide a platform for a united and powerful voice on the role of business in developing sustainable, market-based solutions to poverty;
- Call on governments to create the necessary framework conditions for companies to maximize their contribution to development through inclusive business; and
- Extend an invitation to governments and other stakeholders to partner with business in the common quest for a more inclusive and sustainable future

The event offers an opportunity to advance the inclusive business agenda and stimulate further action through in-depth “learning by sharing” sessions facilitated by experts in the field. Building on recent research into the most pressing issues facing companies striving to achieve inclusive business at scale, specific topics will be discussed in the context of Insight Labs.

International Business Leaders Forum (IBLF)

IBLF has led the field in advocating and promoting business leadership in corporate responsibility and development since its launch in 1990. It was one of the first business-led organizations to recognise that in a globalised economy, social issues are business issues - and that the threats of poverty, growing inequality and environmental degradation cannot be tackled without the full participation of business. An independent, global, not-for-profit organisation, unaligned to any political, partisan or national interests, IBLF is supported by a network of global companies from Europe, America and Asia. Through the active engagement and leadership of CEOs, IBLF operates as a catalyst and facilitator for responsible business practices in 60 countries. www.iblf.org
